The Mayor of Warsaw, Rafał Trzaskowski appeared at the 2019 MIPIM international real estate fair in Cannes, France to show his support for the new concept unveiled for Towarowa 22 in Warsaw. The project is a joint venture between EPP (70%) and Echo Investment (30%).

The plans were designed by the world renowned Danish architectural studio, Bjarke Ingels Group (BIG), which is famous for its spectacular projects all over the world such as Google's HQ in California and Two World Trade Center in New York City. The concept will bring 230,000 sqm of mixed use space to the rapidly developing business area in downtown Warsaw. The landmark project will combine retail space, offices, a hotel, a theatre, a cinema, restaurants, cafés and residential apartments.

Trzaskowski, expressed very optimistic and supportive feedback on the project, "We are very happy that through the cooperation between the investor and the city department we were able to arrive at a project which is going to make us all proud of that part of Warsaw.” Towarowa 22, being at the heart of Wola district, the most rapidly developing area of Warsaw’s downtown, will combine the cultural history of Warsaw with the modern, bustling space surrounded by public gardens.
